

Use a Wiimote to Make Whiteboards Out of Anything

Johnny Lee's description of "Low-Cost Multi-point Interactive Whiteboards Using the Wiimote" may sound boring, but it's actually a very cool and very innovative use of the Wiimote. Since you can hook the controller up to your computer and accept inputs using the Wiimote library interface, you can use its infrared sensors to detect and track infrared light on any kind of surface. With Johnny's app, you can in turn use a cheap DIY IR pen as an input device and make your own whiteboard/input tablet. You should watch the video to see more, but this thing looks really exciting. @Simon: I have to agree, don't marry her. If she wants to make unilateral decisions like that, run your life and decide alone how your kids will be raised, she's not worth it. And she'll only become more of a control-freak once you say "I do".

@Reilaos, Original Asus Fanboy: I may be wrong but I thought any CCD or CMOS camera can detect IR, hence you can see the led of your tv remote light up when you point your webcam or digital camera at it.

Now what is different here is that the camera can ONLY see IR, so I assume the processing of "finding" the point is much easier. Only two shades, light and dark, no need to filter out other colors or shades.

You can of course mod any web cam to filter out anything but IR. There are a bunch of mods out there on how to do that. I started one here [www.flickr.com] but my real camera took a dive during the project, so i never finished the hack, nor documented it further. but you can see the IR leds light up.

What I would like to know is, can I use two wii remotes to increase the coverage area and maybe allow me to walk in front of one or the other without losing connection.

You guys keep on forgetting that you need a Blue Soleil Bluetooth adapter for the Wii to be recognized.

A lot of the software concerning the Wii Remote is based on that piece of hardware from Blue Soleil

He provides the software, as a test, and you can also research [\[multitouch.org\]](http://multitouch.org) or [\[nuigroup.com\]](http://nuigroup.com) to get up all in the scene.

You also have to wander over to Adobe and grab the FLEX SDK plus FLEX Builder 2 - whatever is free for FLEX, download it.

After that you're only limited by your programming ability.

You can do a IR based system with a regular webcam, and the free software that's out there, but you will hardly find any source to modify yourself, as a lot of this stuff is someone's thesis :]

Thanks again to Johnny Lee for stirring the pot once again with an alternative input method.

A-one super cool! My girlfriend swears when we're married our kids will never have gaming systems. (She was, however, into the idea of me teaching our dog to box)

Maybe this will bring her over, DIY tech like this is candy for designers like her.

Logitech Harmony Smart Control with Harmony Hub | $50 | AmazonGraphic: Shep McAllister

Update: Back in stock, if you missed it last week!

$50 for a Logitech Harmony remote is a great deal on its face, but the real reason to buy this model is the included Harmony Home Hub.

The Hub allows you to use your iPhone, Android device, or even an Amazon Echo to control everything a Harmony remote can (which is basically any piece of home theater gear you can think of). So even when you inevitably lose the included remote behind the couch cushions, you'll still have multiple ways to take control of all of your home theater gear.

Considering the hub alone sells for $70 right now, getting the hub plus a remote for $50 is a pretty terrific deal, even if it was as cheap as $45 back around the holidays.

wouldn't it be so much better with a cleanser that warms up as you use it? This Boscia

Detoxifying Black Cleanser does exactly that, and today, it's on sale for $21 on Amazon.

The warmth created on contact helps open up your pores, so activated charcoal can suck impurities out, while vitamin C helps refine your skin's texture. This hot deal won't last long, though, so get yours before this stock gets cleaned out.

TODAY'S BEST MEDIA DEALS

Marvel Cinematic Universe Movies | $2 | AmazonPhoto: Amazon

You don't need to wait for Prime Day to get the benefits. Ahead of the 48-hour event, Amazon is gifting Marvel fans with a big MCU binge opportunity. If you didn't get a chance to catch up before Avengers: Endgame (or even if you did), now is a great time to rewatch all of the MCU films, from OG Iron Man to Thor: Ragnarok and more. If you're seeing Spider-Man: Far From Home this weekend, you'll certainly want to rewatch a few MCU movies before heading to the theater. You can rent each of the Marvel Cinematic Universe Movies for $2 each (down from $4) on Amazon Prime Video.

FYI: It looks like all of the MCU films are available for this price, except for Captain Marvel, which is still a $6 rental and Avengers: Endgame isn't available for rent on Prime Video until July 30.

Firefly 15th Anniversary Set | $15 | AmazonGraphic: Shep McAlliser

It's not exactly a second season, but Firefly fans should still be excited to see that the best show in the history of the 'verse got a special edition 15th anniversary Blu-ray release, and you can get it for the best price since the holidays today.

The contents of the discs are unchanged from the original release, but the set does include some nice box art, a map, and and postcards of all the major characters.

Three Years Private Internet Access | $99Graphic: Shep McAllister

Our readers' favorite VPN recently raised prices for the first time ever, and the company's best-value (and Kinja Deals-exclusive) three-year plan is available for $99. Three year plans aren't available to the general public at all, but if you click this link, you can get three years for $99, which works out to just $2.75 per month. While shorter plan lengths are available, none come close to the per-month pricing of this three-year membership. For example, the publicly available two-year plan costs about $84, and a month-to-month plan will set you back $10 per month.

Our Readers' Favorite VPN Is Raising Prices, But You Have a Week To Lock In the Old Rates

Update: Today is the last day to take advantage of these lower prices.

Read on news.theinventory.com

If you subscribe to the three-year plan today, you'll be able to continue to renew it at the same price for the life of your subscription, so this is a great chance to lock in a a terrific deal.

Xcentz 18W USB-C PD 10,000mAh Battery Pack | $15 | Amazon | Promo code KINJA195

Until very recently, USB-C Power Delivery battery packs were exclusively large. Like 20,000mAh or more, and a few pounds to boot. But if you don't need that much power for a few hours on a plane, this pack from Xcentz is a svelte 10,000mAh, and only $15 today with promo code KINJA195.

To be clear, its USB-C PD port only outputs 18W, not the 30W or even 45W we've seen on larger packs. But I used a sample they sent with my Nintendo Switch on a flight last weekend, and it was fast enough to increase the charge level on my Nintendo Switch while playing Breath of the Wild, albeit not very quickly.
